MISSION

THE MISSION OF THE JEFFERSON SCHOLARS FOUNDATION IS TO SERVE THE UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA BY IDENTIFYING, ATTRACTING, AND NURTURING INDIVIDUALS OF EXTRAORDINARY INTELLECTUAL RANGE AND DEPTH WHO POSSESS THE HIGHEST CONCOMITANT QUALITIES OF LEADERSHIP, SCHOLARSHIP, AND CITIZENSHIP.

LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT AND CHAIRMAN

N 2014-15 THE JEFFERSON SCHOLARS FOUNDATION MARKED ITS 35TH YEAR OF EXISTENCE. AS IN THE 34 PRECEDING YEARS,

The Foundation remained steadfast in its mission to benefit the University and answer the call of the institution.

Throughout the Foundation's history, it has been responsive to the needs and requests of the University. It was created in response to a request from the Admissions Office, led at the time by John Casteen, to help recruit the most outstanding leaders, scholars, and citizens to the undergraduate student body.

Eighteen years later, the Foundation answered another request from the University. When Dean of the College of Arts & Sciences Melvyn Leffler asked for assistance in recruiting the most outstanding graduate students to the University's Ph.D. programs, the Foundation created its Graduate Fellowship Program.

In 2010, the Foundation listened carefully as Terry Sullivan identified a pressing need: replacing almost half of the University faculty over the next decade. Once again, the Foundation took action, creating a chaired professorship program that, when fully implemented and funded, will hopefully bring 20 to 25 scholars of the first rank in their fields to the faculty.

The past year saw excellent progress in all three of the Foundation's programmatic initiatives. The Undergraduate Program completed its 35th selection cycle on a high note: 35 remarkably talented individuals from 16 different states and two foreign countries entered the University as Jefferson Scholars in the fall of 2015. In addition, 278 students nominated to the competition will also matriculate at the University.

The Graduate Fellowship Program experienced a record-setting year. The entering Fellows class will be 24 members strong—19 in the Graduate School of Arts & Sciences, two in the School of Engineering and Applied Science, two in the Darden School of Business, and one Dissertation-Year Fellow. This is by far the largest entering class of Fellows—and for the first time in our history, there will be more than 200 Scholars and Fellows on Grounds.

The search for the first holder of a Jefferson Scholars Foundation Chaired Professorship is at full throttle. We anticipate the holder of this first chair, who will be a member of the faculty of the College of Arts & Sciences, will be named by this time next year.

The past year also witnessed a continuation of the 35-year record of excellence made by Jefferson Scholarship recipients. In the graduating class were: 10 individuals selected to live on the Lawn, the president of the Student Council, the co-president of the Rodman Council, and the chair of Sustained Dialogue, an organization recognized at final exercises as the recipient of the Seven Society James Earle Sargeant Award. Two members of the class received the Outstanding Student Award from the School of Engineering and Applied Science. And for the seventh year in a row, a Scholar was bestowed the Ernest H. Ern Distinguished Student Award. Also in the class were a Fulbright Scholar, a member of the Honor Committee, and twelve Raven Society inductees. The cumulative GPA for the class was 3.725.

The Scholars returning to Grounds are poised to extend this record of achievement. A Scholar will be president of the student body for the second consecutive year. The chair and two vice chairs of the Honor Committee will also be Scholars, as will the chair of the University Judiciary Committee. In addition, 10 Scholars have been selected to live on the Lawn.

The contributions that the Foundation makes to the University each year would not be possible without the generous support of our many benefactors. This past year, the Foundation received $9.97 million in new commitments. We also recorded a positive 7.1% investment return. On June 30, the assets of the Foundation totaled $366.6 million.

Each year, the Foundation experiences some turnover in the membership of its Board of Directors. The terms of John Milton, Claiborne Deming, and Sealy Hopkinson ended this year. All three served the Foundation with distinction and chaired committees of the Board. Their wise counsel will be missed. George K. Martin, Michael A. Pausic, Crisler B. Quick and R. Blair Thomas will join the Board of Directors, and we look forward to their active participation.

This year also witnessed two staff retirements. Donna Slough served the Foundation for twelve years in a variety of capacities, most recently as Senior Executive Assistant. Her devotion to the Foundation and its mission was exemplary and will be greatly missed. Bill Wilson, the director of the Graduate Fellowship Program for the past three years, decided to return to his scholarly pursuits and leaves the Fellowship program and the Foundation much stronger. Under his leadership, the number of Graduate Fellows in residence more than doubled, and the yield on offers made steadily increased. He will remain close by, occupying one of the Foundation offices, where he will write and be available to provide advice and counsel to Scholars and Fellows.

Identifying and attracting the world’s most exceptionally talented individuals to Grounds is the sole mission of the Jefferson Scholars Foundation. When the University has called, the Foundation has answered. We could not have answered in the past and could not answer now and in the future without the support, commitment, and loyalty of those who believe in the University and who recognize the Foundation is a critical piece of the bulwark which Mr. Jefferson dreamed his University would be. To all who have helped us answer the University’s call and to all who will help in the future, we are eternally grateful.

JAMES H. WRIGHT

President

Each year the Jefferson Scholars Foundation suffers the loss of some of its loyal family members. These advocates and supporters contributed significantly to the Foundation's growth and success, and as we mourn their leaving, we are grateful for all that they did for and meant to the Foundation. In 2014-2015 the following individuals departed for better environs taking with them the everlasting appreciation and gratitude of the Foundation.

MARIANNE HOLLAND – Marianne and her husband Bryce were among the first group of alumni and friends who wished to bring the Jefferson Scholarship competition to Greenwich/Fairfield. They established a charitable remainder trust that created the Melissa Holland Scholarship in memory of their daughter, a member of the Class of 1982.

GLENN IRELAND II – A member of the class of 1947, Glenn was an early benefactor whose generosity created the Ireland Scholarship. This scholarship helped expand the Jefferson Scholarship competition to Birmingham, Alabama. Always eager to help, Glenn was a constant source of inspiration.

GLYNN D. KEY – A member of the second class of Jefferson Scholars, Glynn served as chair of the Honor Committee, student representative to the Board of Visitors, and later as an appointed member of the Board of Visitors. A member of the Seven Society, Glynn was an exemplary Scholar and alumna of the Foundation.

EUGENIA MAUSTELLER – Gene, along with her husband Mike who predeceased her, was an early and enthusiastic advocate for the Foundation. The Mausteller Scholarship will help the Foundation continue its efforts to benefit the University that she and Mike loved so very much.

KING OEHMIG – A member of the class of 1973, King and his entire family were long-standing supporters of the Foundation in Chattanooga. The Westend Foundation Scholarship, created by the Oehmigs, has been held by eight Scholars from Eastern Tennessee and will continue to attract the most outstanding students from the State of Tennessee to the University.

RANDOLPH PILLOW – A member of the Class of 1942, Dr. Pillow believed ardently in the concept of merit and established via his estate a scholarship fund that will support numerous Jefferson Scholarship recipients annually. The scholarships will attract outstanding students from the State of Virginia to the University.

MARTIN A. PURCELL – A member of the Class of 1957 and a member of the Seven Society, Skip was a steadfast supporter and advocate. The Purcell Family Scholarship has helped the Foundation attract two students to the University and will continue to do so in perpetuity.

VIRGINIA SARGEANT REYNOLDS – Mrs. Reynolds in 1989 endowed a Jefferson Scholarship in memory of her brother James Earle Sargeant, Class of 1940, who was vice chairman of the Honor Committee and a member of the Seven Society. The Sargeant-Seven Society Scholarship has been held by five recipients and will continue to attract outstanding Virginians to the University.

JAMES G. SIMMONDS – Jim, the Lawrence R. Quarles Professor Emeritus of structural and solid mechanics in the Department of Civil and Environmental Engineering at the University of Virginia, was one of the first faculty members to embrace the Jefferson Scholarship concept. He served on the Jefferson Scholars Selection Committee beginning in 1981 and was the author of every math exam taken by Jefferson Scholarship finalists. His steadfast support and commitment were critical to the Foundation's early and continued success.

DEBORAH TULLIS – Deborah and husband Eli were among the Foundation's earliest supporters. She served numerous times on the Jefferson Scholars Selection Committee, and the Eli W. Tullis and the Deborah and Eli W. Tullis Scholarships have been held by 27 individuals. Always the consummate hostess, Deborah offered her home to a series of events in the late 1980s and early 1990s that established the Jefferson Scholarship concept firmly in the New Orleans secondary school community.

The image features a minimalist design on a solid tan background. A series of white horizontal lines enter from the left, curve downwards, and then curve back up to the right, creating a funnel-like shape. A large, solid teal triangle is positioned in the bottom right corner, partially overlapping the white lines. The word "ANSWERING" is printed in a bold, black, sans-serif font across the center of the image, with the white lines and teal triangle serving as a background for the text.

Conversations on Autism and Sign Language (CASL) explored social communication skills and preferences for those with Autism Spectrum Disorder—even welcoming to the table several academics who identify themselves as on the autism spectrum.

CASL was such a success that the next iteration will be sponsored by an award from the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Co-leading CASL was Matthew Lerner, 2012 Jefferson Fellow and assistant professor of psychology at Stony Brook University in New York. “Many individuals with autism do not want to be ‘cured,’” he explains. “Moreover, they want their own way of interacting and their form of community to be validated, or at least better understood.”

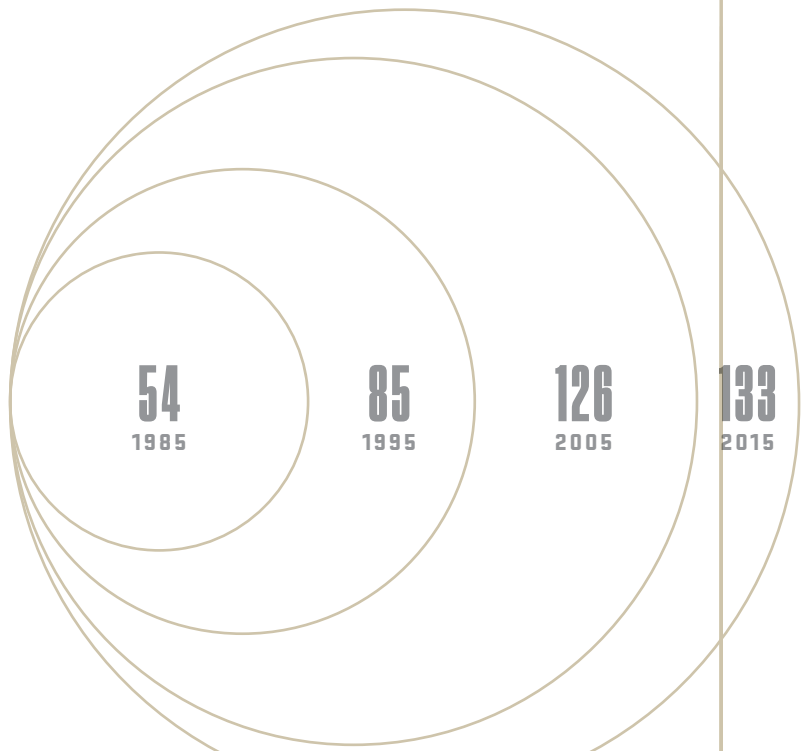

Lerner’s passion to explore Autism Spectrum Disorder is what drew him to U.Va. for his Ph.D. in psychology. His experiences as a Fellow only fueled that passion. From his first days on Grounds, he was captivated by the cross-disciplinary relationships—the synergy of how someone else’s avenue of research might interact with his.

“It is a totally Jefferson Fellows’ idea,” Lerner says, “this sense of, ‘Can we get people from across different disciplines together in a room to think together and break down walls?’”

Attracting creative and passionate leaders like Matthew Lerner to the University of Virginia is the goal of the Jefferson Scholars Foundation. “The long-term vision is to have the Foundation bringing to U.Va. the top undergraduate students, graduate students, and faculty,” affirms Hugh Evans, 1988 Jefferson Scholar and vice president of corporate development and ventures for 3D Systems.

NUMBER OF SCHOLARS IN RESIDENCE 1985-2015

Top scholars are indeed coming—and they are shaping the University of Virginia and its continued impact on the world. In fewer than 40 years, the Foundation has grown into a $350 million endeavor that, according to president Jimmy Wright, is “arguably the most competitive and prestigious merit scholarship program in the country.”

THE DREAM TAKES ROOT

Multiple factors in the 1970s laid the groundwork for the launch of the Jefferson Scholars Foundation. To start, the upheaval and subsequent diversification that followed the civil rights movement changed the face of the entire University. Enrollment more than doubled between 1965 and 1980; and by 1980 it included close to 50 percent women for the first time, as well as almost 10 percent minority students.

That enrollment growth then fueled U.Va.’s ability to compete on a national level for an even greater percentage of exceptional undergraduates. “We had our share in those days, but we wanted a bigger share,” explains John Casteen, former dean of admissions (1975-1982) and U.Va. president (1990-2010). “The University needed to be competitive with private institutions.”

At the same time, the Alumni Association was undergoing its own changes. Gone were the days when alumni gathered only for parties and athletic events, with dues fueling future celebrations. Several chapters, starting with the one in Maryland, responded to Casteen’s charge to increase the quality of admissions, and they did so by using their profits to fund merit-based scholarships for outstanding students from their regions.

Then, in 1980, the Alumni Association approved a University-wide, merit-based scholarship program that would greatly expand what a few chapters were able to accomplish. From the very start, the goal of the Jefferson Scholars Foundation was to emphasize leadership, scholarship, and citizenship.

“There are plenty of smart people running around,” affirms Jimmy Wright. “And there are also plenty of people who want to lead. But finding bright people with the capacity to lead and who are motivated to use their intellectual capacity and leadership not for selfish reasons but to help others—that gets a bit more challenging.”

And so, starting from scratch, the Foundation began.

Notifications were first sent to 177 high schools in 10 regions with strong Alumni Association chapters, asking them to put forth their best candidates. With alumni involved in the screening, the hands-on commitment and sense of ownership was strong from the start.

CRITICAL PIVOT POINTS

Back in those days, the shadow of another merit-based scholarship loomed large: the Morehead-Cain Scholarship at the University of North Carolina. Alumni Association board member Bill Blue traveled to North Carolina in 1980 to learn how the successful foundation worked. A young assistant director named Jimmy Wright graciously offered his insights. Other visits followed, and soon Wright had been recruited away from North Carolina to give leadership to U.Va.’s program. As Scholars, Fellows, board members, and benefactors have confirmed over the years, the Foundation would not be the same without Wright at its helm.

Wright’s arrival coincided with the University’s decision to undertake a series of national capital campaigns. Thus, fundraising became a significant part of Wright’s role. Early on, the decision to focus entirely on major gifts and investments—rather than annual giving campaigns—significantly shaped the Foundation. “We invest every gift, whether $5.00 or $5 million,” Wright explains. “Having the discipline to delay expansion and programmatic initiatives until you have secured the capital—that fiscal discipline sets us apart from most other organizations.”

Over the years, wise investment managers have also made a tremendous difference in how the fund appreciates, says Tom Murdough, former chairman of the board. That strong funding base has strengthened the Foundation’s ability to bring on students of the highest quality.

GROWTH AND EXPANSION

In 1998, the Foundation added a graduate fellowship program at the request of the College and Graduate School of Arts & Sciences. “Many of the best graduate students were going elsewhere because we were not able to make competitive offers,” remembers Mel Leffler, former dean of the College.

“Our graduate students were discussion leaders and lab instructors in some of the biggest and most popular undergraduate courses. So I strongly believed that recruiting more talented graduate students would be a win-win for both the graduate school and the undergraduate College. We could lure individuals to U.Va. who otherwise might have gone to Yale, Cornell, Duke, or Vanderbilt.”

The graduate fellowship came with its own challenges, however. In addition to increased fundraising, the Foundation had to convince senior faculty and administrators that the interdisciplinary structure, so powerful for the Scholars program, would be invaluable to graduate students as well. At the time, “the model for graduate education had become cloisters of individual academic departments,” says Rick Kellogg, former chairman of the board for the Foundation.

Yet, as each year progressed, the graduate students themselves provided the best evidence of the value of an interdisciplinary emphasis. “Graduate school can breed detachment and isolation,” says Peter Swendsen, 2009 Jefferson Fellow and assistant professor at Oberlin Conservatory of Music, in Ohio. “No matter how wide-ranging your background, it is easy to find yourself on an island after a couple of semesters.”

“The Jefferson Fellows community provides a bridge to other islands,” he continues. “My interactions with these smart and talented people gave me a peek into the current state of their fields—gave me access to scholarly language and approaches I would not have otherwise encountered.”

And so, the Graduate Fellowship took off strong. It has now sent 78 philosophers, linguists, clinicians, and more into the workplace, all representing U.Va.

Then in 2010, when Teresa Sullivan stepped in as the University’s eighth president, she pointed out the challenge of replacing faculty over the next decade as they retired. The Foundation responded by offering to create a chaired professorship program, designed to give the University the resources to attract elite talent—with hopes of identifying the first such professor by spring 2016.

“Their impact on the intellectual life of the University is going to be transformative,” Wright predicts. “We think we can eventually have 10-20 of these people on the faculty, and the sky’s the limit in terms of their impact.”

“Each of our three programmatic initiatives—

Scholarships, Fellowships, Professorships—has been a direct response to a University request or an identified need. Every major programmatic decision we have made has been designed to help the University meet a pressing need and to further the Foundation’s mission of attracting exceptionally talented people to Grounds.”

“This helps set a culture of excellence,” agrees Hugh Evans. “The idea is that by putting these hyper-achieving persons among the body politic, it raises everybody’s game. A player who makes everybody else on the team better is invaluable.”

STRONG TIES

Both Fellows and Scholars repeatedly cite the impact of the almost magical sense of community they enjoyed at U.Va.—the camaraderie, support, and cross-disciplinary challenges that enriched their studies.

When asked about the ingredients for this sense of community, Wright refers back to the Foundation’s selection criteria: leadership, scholarship, and citizenship. “You get a bunch of talented, good-hearted people who are motivated for the right reasons,” he says, “and good things happen.”

“By the same token, they are selecting us. They have seen something that they think is unusual and good, and they want to help make that better.”

“And now they are having an impact on their chosen fields and their communities. When it is known that they went to the University of Virginia, that brings a certain amount of distinction and prestige back to the place, too, and we are proud of that.”

Increasingly, Scholars and Fellows are serving as the Foundation’s strongest recruiters and benefactors. “I have been serving on the Jefferson Scholars regional selection committee for the past nine years,” says Jasmine Yoon, a 2003 Jefferson Scholar who is now a federal prosecutor in Virginia. “I try to find and recruit bright and inspiring young leaders to join the community.”

“The Jefferson Scholars Foundation made a bet on me when I was an 18-year-old nobody,” adds Evans. “So about five years ago I set out on the path to fund a named Jefferson Scholarship as the dividend the Foundation deserves for its investment in me.”

The Sidonie K. Evans Family Scholarship, named after Evans’ 11-year old developmentally disabled daughter, seeks candidates of excellence who may want to spend a career working with the developmentally disabled. Says Evans, “It brought full circle the debt of gratitude I feel toward the organization.”

That debt of gratitude is multiplied many times over across the spectrum of Scholars and Fellows since the Foundation’s first graduating class in 1985. And each year since, the Jefferson Scholars Foundation brings to U.Va. a new class of students—leader scholars like Lerner, Yoon, and Evans—who are hungry for knowledge and eager to have a positive influence on the world. As the University continues to grow and dream, the Foundation will embrace and empower those dreams as well.

DEVELOPMENT

P HILANTHROPY HAS BEEN A CORNERSTONE OF THE JEFFERSON SCHOLARS FOUNDATION'S SUCCESS OVER THE LAST 35 YEARS.

From the initial campaign efforts in 1985 to raise $5 million in three years to the most recent campaign to raise $100 million in six years, the Foundation has continued to meet—and surpass—its fundraising goals, thanks to its dedicated corps of benefactors.

At the close of the 2014-15 fiscal year, the Foundation remains deeply grateful for the generous support of its donors. Funds raised in fiscal year 2014-15 total $9.97 million and are included in the Foundation's current initiative to raise $70 million in new commitments over a 10-year period. To date, the Foundation has reached more than half of its 10-year goal in fewer than four years, receiving gifts totaling more than $45 million. These new funds will be directed towards endowing professorships, fellowships, and scholarships and will have a tremendous impact on the University as it prepares to enter its third century.

As has always been the case, the Foundation's most valuable asset is the people who support our efforts. It is truly remarkable that after more than three decades, benefactors who invested in the Foundation's mission in the early years remain committed and continue to support us. In addition, the next generation has been recruited to ensure the Foundation's ongoing financial stability. As longtime board member Landon Hilliard stated, "A lot of very successful people who have graduated from the University were brought in by a succession of the good people involved. As a result, it catches on like a magnet." The Foundation is humbled by the generous commitment of the generations of "good people involved." We look forward to continuing this work and to deepening our impact on the University in the years to come.

BENEFACTORS

The Jefferson Scholars Foundation offers its benefactors the opportunity to name scholarships and fellowships. A named Jefferson Scholarship or Jefferson Graduate Fellowship may be created with a gift of $500,000. Darden Fellowships have a naming level of $1,000,000.

DONORS

Those who have contributed or committed $10,000 or more to the Jefferson Scholars Foundation from July 1, 2014 to June 30, 2015.

PLANNED GIFTS

Those who have made planned gift designations during the fiscal year July 1, 2014 to June 30, 2015 for the benefit of the Jefferson Scholars Foundation.

FINANCE

The Foundation is pleased to report that we experienced a solid 2014-2015 fiscal year. Returns on our investment portfolio finished strong relative to related benchmark rates. Operational spending came in significantly under budget, and the Foundation again received substantial philanthropic support.

ENDOWMENT RETURN

After a five year period where our investment return with the University of Virginia Management Company averaged 15.4%, the fiscal year 2014-2015 return finished at 7.7 %. While this investment return was half the five year average, it matched up very well against the benchmarks used for comparison purposes. The Foundation’s other significant investments had returns that trended in a similar manner and, as a result, the Foundation can report an overall annual weighted average investment return of 7.1% for the fiscal year ended June 30, 2015.

This level of investment return more than offsets the Foundation’s use of endowment income to fund our operational expenses. The endowment grew through the excess investment return plus the effect of approximately $10.4 million in gifts and pledge payments received as a result of the Foundation’s development efforts.

OPERATIONAL BUDGET

The Foundation has an approved $15.0 million operating budget for the 2015-2016 fiscal year. This budget is $914 thousand or 6.5% over the fiscal year 2014-2015 operating budget, with the increase almost entirely due to additional spending in the awards made to Scholars, Fellows, and Faculty.

Functionally, we project the budget allocations at $11.8 million or 78% for direct and indirect programmatic support, $1.5 million or 10% for administrative expenses and the remaining $1.8 million or 12% for fundraising costs. Assuming the entire budget amount is spent, we forecast a 4.83% endowment spend rate for the year.

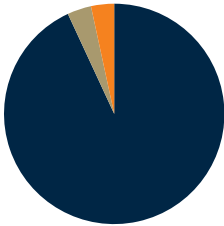

Actual spending during fiscal year 2014-2015 was approximately $253 thousand or 1.8% below the approved budget of $14.1 million. This savings resulted in an endowment spend rate of 4.93%.

CONCLUSION

We remain grateful for the success of the investment portfolio and the continued support of our benefactors as we pursue our charitable mission. We believe the future looks bright as we build upon our financial strength to expand the depth and breadth of our programs. As always, we are appreciative of the time and financial resources given to the Foundation and strive to make this an organization with which people are proud to be involved.

YEAR IN REVIEW | When the 2015-2016 academic year begins this fall, the Faculty Fellows Program will have grown to upwards of forty members, all recipients of Jefferson Scholars Foundation Awards for excellence in teaching. These best-of-the-best faculty can now be seen at all Foundation events, especially the Scholars and Fellows research symposia and group discussions over meals. Also, this past year the Faculty Fellows began meeting on their own, once at a formal dinner to discuss ways to enhance the Foundation's mission to the University, and then again at a symposium hosted by Archie Holmes Jr., Vice-Provost for Educational Innovation and Interdisciplinary Studies, to examine the strengths and weaknesses of classroom instruction. Intellectual sparks fly when the most talented teachers gather in one place, and Scholars, Fellows, and staff are excited to be part of this new era in the Foundation's history.

This fall semester also kicks off the search for the first Jefferson Scholars Foundation Chaired Professor. The candidates for this premier faculty position will find this vibrant community of undergraduate, graduate, and faculty to be not only a campus home like none other, but also a place where the future of higher learning and scholarship is being made.

HARTFIELD-JEFFERSON SCHOLARS TEACHING PRIZE

Each year the Jefferson Scholars Foundation invites students and faculty in the School of Engineering and Applied Science to nominate members of the faculty for the Hartfield-Jefferson Scholars Teaching Prize. Made possible through a $1,000,000 gift from an anonymous donor, this prize celebrates and recognizes excellent undergraduate teaching and curriculum development in engineering.

The recipients have demonstrated that communicating knowledge and inspiring students are as important to the educational process as scholarship; they exemplify the highest standards and practices of teaching.

JEFFERSON SCHOLARS FOUNDATION AWARD FOR EXCELLENCE IN TEACHING

Due to the generosity of an anonymous donor, the Jefferson Scholars Foundation recognizes University faculty who have demonstrated excellence in teaching and who have sought to instill in their students the virtues of scholarship and a love of learning. Those receiving the award receive $5,000.

YEAR IN REVIEW | When Thomas Jefferson said that a free people cannot exist without higher education, he was issuing a warning to our fledging nation. Graduate students are those who have heeded that warning, for they represent the future of higher learning and scholarly excellence. Learning about a field of knowledge is one thing; mastering a field is quite another—as only mastery ensures its continuance.

But a company of excellent graduate students has great practical benefits for a university as well. In their role as teaching assistants and lab instructors, these young scholars are often on the front lines of advising and instruction. What is more, the very best faculty are attracted to universities that boast gifted graduate students. Securing and advancing new knowledge is a team effort in which graduate students play a decisive role. The University of Virginia will not be able to attract its next round of superb new faculty without superb graduate students.

This year, the University will welcome 22 new Jefferson Fellows to Grounds—the most in the history of the program. An additional two Jefferson Fellows were selected but will defer their Fellowships while pursuing other academic opportunities. Many are members of Phi Beta Kappa and graduated Cum Laude. Many have already published in the top scholarly journals in their field and garnered the premiere academic awards of their undergraduate institutions. In attracting this caliber of graduate students to Grounds, the Jefferson Scholars Foundation is helping the University take a gigantic step forward in securing and enhancing scholarly excellence.

GRADUATE FELLOWS DEPARTING THE PROGRAM

ROBERT DANIEL FOSTER JR.

MACFARLANE FAMILY FELLOW

Darden School of Business

Washington and Lee University (B.S.)

University of Southern California (M.S.)

Hermosa Beach, California

Robert recently completed his M.B.A. at the Darden School of Business, graduating in May with the class of 2015. During the past year, he served as the president of the Consulting Club, one of the largest career clubs at Darden. He also served the larger University community as judge on the University Judiciary Committee. Throughout his tenure at the Darden School, Robert was an active member of the Raven Society, U.Va.'s oldest and most prestigious honorary society, and was honored by the Society this past spring with the John L. Colley and Tommy Lancaster Colley Fellowship. Academically, Robert was nominated by the faculty to serve as tutor for the first year M.B.A. curriculum. He has also been active in community service, working with the Building Goodness Foundation in April and serving the Blue Ridge Area Food Bank through his Innovation and Design Experience project. Robert worked with the Charlottesville Whole Foods Market and twelve local brands to help brands connect with customers. After graduation, he plans to move to the San Francisco Bay Area to pursue his interest in entrepreneurship.

DANIEL ELLIOT FRANZ

PAUL B. BARRINGER FAMILY FELLOW

Department of Mathematics

Kenyon College (B.A.)

Rochester, New York

Daniel is currently pursuing research in asymptotic invariants of finitely generated groups. He presented research this year at a Department of Algebra Seminar at U.Va., and was then invited to do so again at Cornell University and the University of Oxford. He will complete his dissertation in 2016 and plans to seek a position in university teaching and research. Throughout his years at U.Va., Daniel has been an enthusiastic participant in his department's outreach program to local elementary schools.

ANNE MARIE GUARNERA

JOHN A. BLACKBURN FELLOW

Department of Spanish, Italian and Portuguese

Bryn Mawr College (B.A.)

University of Virginia (M.A.)

Scotch Plains, New Jersey

Anne is currently writing her dissertation, which she has given the working title: "Black America: Transnational Racial Identities in Cuba, Mexico, and Brazil, 1929-1959." She will continue to write during the 2015-2016 school year with the support of a generous dissertation fellowship from the Department of Spanish, Italian and Portuguese. She looks forward to completing her dissertation this coming year.

CHRISTOPHER MICHAEL IRWIN

OLIVE B. AND FRANKLIN C. MAC KRELL FELLOW

Department of Astronomy

University of Pittsburgh (B.A.) (B.S.)

University of Virginia (M.S.)

Irwin, Pennsylvania

In May 2012, Chris completed his graduate coursework and received an M.S. in astronomy. He is now pursuing his Ph.D. and intends to graduate in the summer of 2016 and pursue a postdoctorate position in astronomy. From 2010-2012, Chris researched supernovae—the extreme deaths of massive stars—combining theoretical work with analysis of data from the Chandra X-ray Observatory. This work led to four co-authored papers published in The Astrophysical Journal in 2011-2012. In addition to his work on the brightest known supernovae, Chris has begun his dissertation, which will examine gamma-ray bursts—short bursts of extremely intense radiation which are thought to accompany the death of the universe's most massive stars. His aim is to elucidate the connection between very bright supernovae and gamma-ray bursts, which are often observed together, through theoretical study and numerical simulation. Two papers on this topic are in preparation. In addition to his research, Chris had the unique opportunity to design and teach his own course, "Introduction to Stars and Galaxies," during the summer of 2012 and the privilege of giving a talk at the Kyoto Supernova and Gamma-Ray Burst Conference in fall 2013. In spring 2014, he served on the astronomy department's graduate admissions committee. Recently, Chris received a Virginia Space Grant Consortium Graduate Fellowship award for the 2015-2016 academic year.

ROSEMARY LOUISE MALFI

JEFFERSON ARTS AND SCIENCES
DISSERTATION YEAR FELLOW

Department of Environmental Sciences
Bryn Mawr College (B.A.)
Lansdale, Pennsylvania

Rosemary will complete her Ph.D. in environmental science during the summer of 2015. Her research examines the effect food shortages and parasites have on bee populations. Her research has already been published in five peer-reviewed articles, which have drawn national attention, including a feature article in National Geographic. Most recently, Rosemary and her undergraduate research mentee, Staige Davis, had a paper accepted to Oecologia, a highly ranked journal in the field of ecology. During her graduate years, Rosemary has mentored eight undergraduate students in her lab and has taught four different courses of her own design. In 2014, her dedication to undergraduate education garnered her the Teaching Resource Center's Outstanding Teaching Assistant Award and the Fred Holmsley Moore Teaching Award from the Department of Environmental Sciences. Rosemary has accepted a postdoctoral position at the University of California at Davis.

SARAH G. NOLAN

SIMPSON THACHER & BARTLETT
FELLOW

School of Law
College of William and Mary (B.A.)
University of Wisconsin-Madison (M.A.)
University of Virginia (J.D.)
Fairfax, Virginia

This year, Sarah participated in the U.Va. Health Law Clinic, which provides estate planning and public benefits assistance to low income, mentally ill, and elderly clients in the Charlottesville area. She was also a member of the editorial board of the Virginia Journal of Social Policy and the Law. After graduation, Sarah will be clerking for Judge Manning of the Federal Mine Safety and Health Review Commission in Denver, Colorado.

OUTDOOR LEADERSHIP WEEKEND

This three-day weekend in early September allows first year Scholars to focus on getting to know each other through a series of team-building exercises. Highlights include campfire dinners, both low rope and high rope challenges, and a night hike where sensory skills are put to the test. The weekend is the first of many adventures the Scholars will experience together over the next four years.

INSTITUTE FOR LEADERSHIP AND CITIZENSHIP

Held in August, the Institute for Leadership and Citizenship brought the class of rising second year Scholars back to Charlottesville for two weeks prior to the start of the new academic year. The Institute focuses on exploring various forms of leadership while helping Scholars refine their own personal leadership styles through seminars and workshops. Also included in the Institute are a weeklong service project and various other community-based activities that help the Scholars focus on what it truly means to be good citizens of their communities.

Highlights of 2014 Institute include:

- Remarks from JS Alumna Karen Heys (JS '94), chief of operations of the Peace Corp's office of the Third Goal at the Opening Dinner.
- ModernGuild career exploration with a coach who guides second year Scholars through online programs focused on career exploration and readiness. The program is delivered through live video sessions, structured assignments, hands-on mentoring, and industry interactions.
- An improvisational comedy workshop with JS alumnus Tyler Frankenburg (JS '12).
- A puzzle hunt by JS alumnus Todd Etter (JS '90).
- A community service project with Boys & Girls Club with a presentation and discussion with Executive Director James Pierce.
- A session on Ethics and the Good Life by Darden Professor Bobby Parmar.
- A discussion with McIntire Professor David Touve, director of the Galant Center for Entrepreneurship.
- A closing dinner with remarks by JS alumnus Steven Shepard (JS '01), an attorney for Susman Godfrey who served in the JAG Corp for four years.

FOREIGN TRAVEL

During the summer prior to their third year, all Scholars are invited to participate in a foreign travel/study experience through one of the many opportunities provided by the University's International Studies Office. In 2014, the Scholars participated in 12 different programs. In addition to the structured program, each Scholar has the opportunity to undertake an independently designed inquiry into a topic of personal interest.

BRAZIL: THE CITY OF SALVADOR THROUGH FILM

This course offers students the opportunity to learn about Brazilian culture through film screenings, readings, discussions, and class excursions. The interaction between the classroom and site visits will provide students with a culturally and geographically diverse experience.

SHANGHAI, CHINA

East China Normal University is one of the earliest-established universities in China as well as one of the most prestigious universities in the country. The long-term language classes are designed for students who aim to improve their knowledge of Chinese and Chinese language skills.

SUSTAINABLE PRACTICES IN DENMARK

This course in Denmark examines several programs being undertaken by local leaders to address problems in their communities. Students will see what is being done to promote sustainability in four areas: green energy, sustainable transportation, food security, and what are called "livable cities."

LONDON: CULTURE PAST & PRESENT

An intensive program designed for students in the humanities and social sciences interested in encountering the rich culture of one of the world's great cities. Alongside a course of literature and history and an urban experience of London, the program will take full advantage of the extraordinary resources of the city.

OXFORD

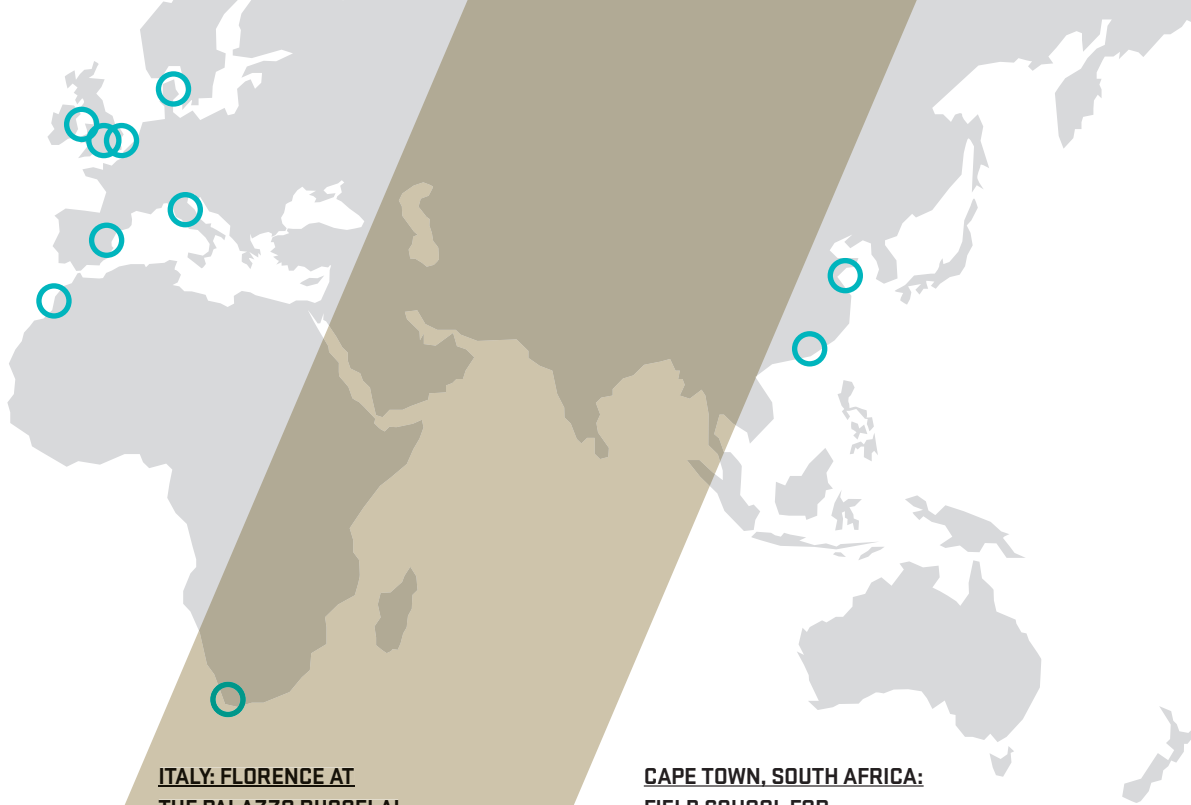

The summer program focuses on comparative culture and society in Britain, Europe and America with courses in literature, economics and commerce, history, politics, law and health care.

JEFFERSON GLOBAL SEMINARS IN HONG KONG

This program offers students a unique, multi-faceted perspective on their coursework; opportunities to build relationships with international peers by working collaboratively with students from Hong Kong, China, and across the world; and the chance to develop a global frame of reference that will set them apart for leadership in the future.

UNIVERSITY INTERSHIP PROGRAM - DUBLIN

U.Va.'s University Internship Programs office and the International Studies Office have partnered with EUSA to develop, build, and customize internships in a variety of professional fields in Dublin, Ireland.

ITALY: FLORENCE AT THE PALAZZO RUCCELLAI

The Institute, established in 1999, is located in the heart of Florence at Palazzo Rucellai, one of three buildings designed by 15th century architect and humanist Leon Battista Alberti. Courses seek to maximize the opportunities offered by this unique urban setting. Field trips, museum visits, and attendance at performances frequently complement formal classwork.

MOROCCO

This program is ideal for students who want to study French language, Moroccan civilization, and Arabic, and have never traveled to North Africa. Students will learn about many facets of Moroccan civilization, language, and culture. This program will also provide a deeper immersion in a Francophone country and provide insight into North African civilization and culture.

VALENCIA, SPAIN

An enriching and comprehensive experience for the student interested in becoming well-versed in Spanish and Latin American culture and languages. In addition to an extensive list of courses aimed towards the academic enrichment of the student, the program also entails a variety of activities and experiences that will expand your knowledge of Spain and its people.

CAPE TOWN, SOUTH AFRICA: FIELD SCHOOL FOR PUBLIC HEALTH RESEARCH

This program introduces students to public health research practice by giving them a hands-on opportunity to carry out small, mentored research projects in a community setting in Cape Town, South Africa. Participation will help students develop valuable skills in study design, data collection and analysis, and reflection on the ethical challenges of research.

ST. KITTS AND NEVIS: PUBLIC HEALTH SCIENCES

Participants will learn and apply the tenets of social determinants of child health as they explore and analyze child asthma challenges in St. Kitts and Nevis. Culturally respectful engagement will be emphasized in the assessment of existing resources and the development of community-based health education materials sensitive to the priorities of the indigenous people of St. Kitts and Nevis.

ENRICHMENT DINNER

Our fall Scholar-Fellow Enrichment Dinner took place on November 7 with remarks by Andrew Kaufman, Ph.D., Russian literature scholar, creator of the Books Behind Bars program at U.Va. and author of Give War and Peace a Chance: Tolstoyan Wisdom for Troubled Times (Simon & Schuster, 2014).

ALUMNI CONNECTIONS

The Alumni Connections program matches current Jefferson Scholars with alumni who provide career advice, shadowing opportunities, and summer internships. In 2014-15, over 50 Scholars utilized the alumni network in a variety of ways.

RESEARCH

JEFFERSON PUBLIC CITIZENS GROUPS

Scholars in JPC Group: Sumedha

Deshmukh, Jeremy Jones

Faculty Advisor: Rae Blumberg

Community Partner: Navya Disha

Project Title: Improving Health, Wellbeing and Livelihood via Water Loans for the Peri-Urban in Bangalore, India

Navya Disha, a Grameen Koota affiliate, is a charitable trust in Bangalore, India that provides microloans for the construction of water and sanitation projects. Most recipients are women, and most loans are aimed at improving health, welfare, and income-generation. The team will use Rapid Appraisal to holistically assess the impacts of these loans. Working with Navya Disha, they will incorporate their findings into loan, assessment, and education programs to implement sustainable change based on community needs.

Project Title: Evaluation of the Technical and Social Implications of Introducing a Secondary Water Distribution System in Rosa Grande, Nicaragua.

This JPC team will partner with Bridges to Community to evaluate the implications of introducing a secondary water distribution system in Rosa Grande, Nicaragua. Using a Systems Feasibility Study and select Participatory Rural Appraisal methods, team members will investigate how technical and social infrastructures affect integration of the secondary system. The goal of this research is to facilitate comprehensive integration of the secondary system, and to help guide the design and implementation of similar systems in the future.

Scholars in JPC Group: Joe Dardick

Faculty Advisor: David Edmunds

Community Partner: The Healthy
Appalachia Institute

Project Title: Assessing the Feasibility of Community Oriented Health
Logistics (COHL)

This program will be implemented in Williamson, WV. The goal of the project is to increase public health related activities through a community participatory approach. Working with community health workers, team members will use mHealth, health education through SMS, to provide Appalachian youth with incentivized education about nutrition and fitness. COHL targets Appalachian youth through a commonly used and accepted medium of mobile phones; this study will test its feasibility.

Scholars in JPC Group: Parisa

Project Title: Examining the Impact of Participation in Debate on Charlottesville Students.

Parents, teachers, and policymakers widely accept the positive impact of participation in after-school programs on middle school students. Current literature, however, contains little information on the isolated benefits of particular programs. Specifically, very little has been done to explore the effects of participating in debate. This project thus seeks to find the impact of debate on middle school students' personal growth, particularly when compared to the effects of participating in other after-school activities.

DAVID A. HARRISON III UNDERGRADUATE RESEARCH AWARDS

These research awards support students who present detailed plans for research projects that have been endorsed by a faculty mentor. A Faculty Senate Committee selects the winners, who receive up to $3,000. Faculty mentors who oversee the project receive $1,000.

John Connolly, of Wilmington, Delaware, a second-year Scholar, is conducting archival research to investigate the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s political, social and theological beliefs, and how they influenced his public ministry.

Will Evans, of Sewanee, Tennessee, a third-year political and social thought distinguished major, is researching an effort to preserve Belize's Chiquibul National Park.

ANDREI MARASOIU PRESENTS DURING THE ANNUAL JEFFERSON SCHOLARS FOUNDATION'S FELLOWS SYMPOSIUM

FELLOWS SYMPOSIUM

The Jefferson Scholars Foundation hosted its 13th annual Fellows Symposium in February. Held during the Graduate Selection Weekend, the Symposium is an excellent opportunity for the Jefferson Fellowship candidates to learn about the high level of research in which the current Jefferson Fellows are engaged. The 16 presentations covered topics from the structure of the Milky Way to the science of founding a business. Open to the public, the Symposium displays the interdisciplinary focus of the Fellows Program as well as demonstrates its commitment to public scholarship. To view the abstracts from the 2015 Symposium, visit jeffersonscholars.org/symposium.

SHADWELL SOCIETY SPEAKER SERIES

AN EVENING WITH JON MEACHAM

On October 3, 2014 members of the University and Charlottesville communities welcomed Pulitzer Prize-winning author and historian Jon Meacham, author of “Thomas Jefferson: The Art of Power,” in the inaugural Shadwell Society Speaker Series. Hundreds attended the lecture at Old Cabell Hall, which focused on getting the public—specifically younger people and college students—engaged in the political process.

Geographic areas from which the Foundation has secured contributions of at least $500,000 are eligible to become part of the annual regional competition process. Regional selection committees composed of University alumni and friends are charged annually with the responsibility of reviewing and screening all nominees from their areas. Based on the number of schools participating in each region, the regional committees select from one to four candidates as finalists in the competition.
